

Dleígu Lullabies

Most songs in the Lingít culture are restricted from general public use because of clan ownership. The songs included in this recording are in the public domain, either released by a clan for general use or simply not owned: children's songs and lullabies.

Haagú S'é!

A boy's lullaby (Dleígu)
From Charlie Joseph - Kaal.átk'

Haagú s'é, haagú s'é, k'isáani hee yahaa,
Téel' aahéix oowax'aká, Wa.éich gwáa eeyaták-a
Hee eenaa.aa, hee eenaa.aa,
Hee eenaa.aa, hee eenaa.aa

Come here little boys, the dog salmon are schooling up in the stream, you can spear one!

Suggestions or corrections for these lessons or ideas for future lessons may be directed to robyslittlefield@gci.net

North American Traditional Indian Values Enrichment, Inc. (NATIVE Inc.)
P. O. Box 2212 Sitka, Alaska 99835

©1998, reproduction of this material will most likely be approved if it is used for educational purposes. Contact us at the address above for confirmation. Of course, donations are always welcome and tax deductible.

Shaakindustoow (Ed Littlefield) gave Lorrie Heagy permission to include these Dleígu Lullabies as part of this Sealaska Thru the Cultural Lens curriculum project. He may be contacted at edwardlittlefield@hotmail.com. For more information on his musical work: <https://nativejazzquartet.com>